➔ Information About Le Reve:

Translated into English, the French Le Rêve means the Dream. The tower rises 210 meters with 82 apartment units spread over its 50 floors. It has already topped out and completion is scheduled for February 2006. The design incorporates two apartment types--one allowing for two units per floor and the other requiring a whole floor to itself. In essence every unit is a penthouse. However, noteworthy distinction may still be applied to the topmost unit or super penthouse--a duplex apartment of unique design with not only 4 dedicated lifts, but also an interior elevator to service its two floors. Highest prices are reportedly in the range of US $7 million. All residents of Le Rêve benefit from secure private valet parking (with separate living accommodation for chauffeurs on parking floors), access to the temperature-controlled rooftop pool and landscaped gardens, a fully-equipped gymnasium and 24-hour concierge service. his near neighbor to the MAG 218 tower will be striking in its dissimilarities.

Appearance-wise the Le Rêve features a mature, classic design while the MAG 218 presents a more youthful, contemporary look. The real differences lie in the interiors and the target market for these two towers. While the MAG 218 is designed to highlight simple functionality and modest yet stylish living, the Le Rêve aims to offer a fully-serviced, exclusive and luxurious lifestyle. It must be said, however, that like the MAG 218, the Le Rêve is more a statment of simple elegance than oppulance or pretension. The tower, despite its exclusivity, will complement the other towers in the neighborhood by adding yet one more unique and distinctive design.
